

Submitted By

Name Muhammad Ishfaq

Student ID 16002

Department CS 2nd Semester

Submitted To

Sir Naeem Ullah

Iqra National University Peshawar

[About the Ceremony I Have Attendant Recently:]

If you look back and think about the ceremonies you have attended, what you remember is emotions attached with near ones, not the centerpieces, flowers or even the dress. Two months back this is exactly what I have felt as a family when my best friend Rekha was getting married. I personally as living outside of my city, thought will be out of reach. But eventually, did manage to get a count on.

The two of us are very close, couldn't remember how long. So, it was a beautiful morning for me when I reached her place and she gets jumped in tears, as some Friends are forever.

Carrying on, she started introducing her house full of beautiful purchases and preparations for the marriage in swing. She had only two days left for her big day. On the very next day of my reach, Rekha took me to her room and scrambled to invent a story about how her life is going to be after marriage. Finally, she broke the ice and said, "Two people, might just look perfect for each other." And What about in real!? She declared. I quietly tried to calm her down and said, "Just by thinking negatively one can never be happy ever." Look, Rekha, in life we have to make some adjustments and probably to think about the other person whom you are knotting to." Rekha was grabbed in emotions took a little breath and said, "What about a girl's change in spending over a decade with these walls, home, and family."

Her mother replied by entering into the room, "Marriage indeed is a big commitment and one of the biggest life's decision" her mother on bursting in tears continued, "The person we decide to pair up for life, share a home with and how satisfied we are with it makes a huge difference." After all, I know, "You are wise enough to look after things positively!" With a grace look, Rekha hugged her mother and said, "I will never let you down." Rest of night went off in sleeping mode. Next day was the wedding day. The ceremony was going to begin at 6 in the evening. The reception was scheduled at 9 PM. "It was indeed a starting of a hectic day," I said! By the time her mother replied, "Oh yes, I agree on that."

"A big canopy was set up for the reception of the ceremony," Uncle said right after that. Many friends and relatives started to walk in the hall. Aisha (one of our friend) said, "Oh, Rekha looks amazing. And the groom looks so looking."

By keeping her eyes on the couple, Angelica (groom's friend) commented, "The beautiful pair indeed." Conversation went on and off as Aisha said they should go to London's beech party for their honeymoon! "What a great idea", Rekha said! Later, "They should join California and cruising coasting." She added!

After that, "I gathered all of her friends and offered great ritual foods!"

In midst of dinner, "The variety of foods are offered to the participants as well." Aisha declared. Most of the guests including friends took leave by this time except for the people with near relations of bridegroom's stayed for the rest of the ceremony. The couple now then kept promises to each other in front of the fire by Mantras and stepped to left for their hometown.

Rekha's parents were emotional, why wouldn't they be as their daughter who has grown up here and was not going to stay onwards. But they were relaxed for all that had gone well in the ceremony. "All well that ends well"! They said thankfully.

