Question # 5

Answer

Six step of decision :-

- ① Identify the problem.
- ② Search for alternative
- ③ weigh the alternative
- ④ make a choice
- ⑤ implement the choice
- ⑥ Evaluate the result
and if necessary, start
the process again

Identify the problem.

To solve a problem, you must first determine what the problem actually is. You may think you know but you need to check it out.

2) Search for alternatives:

It seems obvious what you have to do to address the problem occasionally, this is true, but some times it is important to identify possible alternatives.

Weight the alternatives:

once a number of ideas have been generated you need to access each of them to see how effective they might be in addressing the problem.

Make a choice:-

Some individuals and groups avoid making decision in itself. By postponing a decision you may eliminate a number of options and alternatives.

Implement the decisions -

Once you have made a decision, it must be implemented with major decision.

This may involve detailed planning to ensure that all part of the operation are informed of their part in the change.

Creative Thinking :-

Creative side is most useful in identifying new or unusual alternative. Too often you can get stuck in a pattern of thinking that has been successful in the past - you think of ways that you have handled similar problem in the past.

Question # 4

Answer:
Centralization and Decentralization are the two types of structure that can be found in the organization.

Centralization :-

It is an authority which means the power of planning and decision making are exclusively in the hand of top management. It alludes to the concentration of all the powers at the apex level.
