Al-Shifa Hospital:-

During last summer, one of my friend met with an accident. He was admitted to the Al-Shifa Hospital, where I paid him a visit. I took this opportunity to see the entire hospital. As I entered the hospital, I saw people coming & going. I went to the enquiry office & enquired about the wards.

First of all, I visited general ward where my friend was admitted. He was quite better now as his wounds has healed. Then I visited the surgical ward. I saw patients ~~lay~~ lying silently on their beds. Some of the patients had their arms & legs bandaged & plastered. I also saw how a nurse & a doctor were attending to them. They were very sympathetic towards the patients. The doctor was directing to the nurse to give them the necessary medicines. His way of talking was itself very consoling. A peaceful atmosphere prevailed in the whole ward. Then I went to the medical ward. I saw some of the patients lying on their beds very pensively. From their faces, I guessed their pathetic plights. They all seemed to be disgusted with their diseases. In the mean-while, a doctor took a round of that ward.

A number of junior doctors were also accompanying him. The doctor was enquiring about the welfare of the patients individually.

He listened very sympathetically to the agonies of the patients. He was also giving injections to some of the patients. To others, he gave dosages of medicines or mixtures.

Then, I turned towards the operation theatre. Outside the theatre, I saw patients awaiting an operation lying on stretchers. The corridor presented a sombre look.

Some of the people after recovering from their problems or illness, were sitting in the lawns of the hospital. They were playing cards & chess. They were enjoying themselves on the grassy lawns, while some of the people were going home after completely recovering from their illness. They were in a delightful mood.

The entire hospital presented a very gloomy look to me. The plight of the patients & the seriousness of prevailing atmosphere touched me deeply. The behaviour of the doctors & nurses was worthy of commendation. They acted most wisely & ably while handling the problems of the patients. The patients, in turn, were also happy with their sympathetic behaviour.

Finally, I came out of the hospital. There was a world of difference b/w the atmosphere that prevailed outside & inside the hospital.
