Q1. Discuss the implications of social media for conventional media in detail.

Social Media:

Social media life alludes to sites and applications that are intended to permit individuals to share content rapidly, productively, and continuously. While numerous individuals get to online networking through cell phone applications, this specialized instrument began with PCs, and web-based life can allude to any web specialized device that permits users to extensively share content and connect with the general population all over the world.

Traditional media:

Any type of mass communication accessible before the approach of advanced media. This incorporates TV, radio, papers, books, and magazines. Conventional media alludes to promoting channels that have been utilized for quite a long time. These are the time tested strategies that organizations have depended on for quite a long time. These channels can be truly viable, and for some organizations, they represent the whole of the publicizing financial plan.

Relationship between conventional media and social media:

Notwithstanding the manner in which it's regularly situated, conventional and new media don't need to clash. These mediums can really be utilized together to make your publicizing effort more grounded than at any other time. Conventional and new media can supplement each other, with each assuming an essential job.

Impact Of Social Media Over Conventional Media:

The way wherein we ingest and pass on information and news online has changed certainly since electronic life was imagined. For one, regular media isn't, now a solitary bearing street of communication: presently, consumers can look into the conversation and affect the news. Social media life has moreover allowed news to be gotten progressively, for instance just seconds after a significant occasion happens. Web-based life can in like manner be used to perceive examples and make desires reliant on conversations inhabits that before would be done forking out a large number of dollars on outlines. In the time span of the practical ease of use of an article or story, similarly, as its compass, has taken off with the help of social sharing methodology. That is the means by which web-based life is changing traditional media after some time.

Circulation of information:

The general population would now have the option to use news and information on different stages and rapidly as it happens. Our enthusiasm to perceive what's happening in the news, actually, makes it huge for media sources to post through social media. Notwithstanding, it's not commonly the official source that gets to the news first. As we've seen with live events (sports and delight), destructive occasions and political statements, web-based systems, for instance, Twitter and Facebook license everyone to add to and control the news, showing up at a tuned-in swarm logically, normally speedier than any regular media source has the chance to circulate a story.

Since audience members can clergyman their own news sources by following explicit Twitter handles and Facebook/Instagram accounts, this predefined access to prompt news and features makes it both progressively hard for news outlets to contact an enormous crowd and simpler for buyers to process the news they need.

Public Opinion:

Maybe the greatest impact of social media on customary media and substance is that now everybody feels like they have a voice. Regardless of whether through Facebook, Snapchat, or Medium, internet-based life has given an open discussion to any individual who has a supposition. While this has made an overwhelmingly immersed social atmosphere, this has additionally prompted a certified rush of voices and influencers on social.

Social Media VS Conventional Media:

Social media isn't just utilized by people to stay in touch with companions yet additionally by brands as a compelling method for interfacing with their crowd. Web-based life has had such an effect, that we would believe it to be a vital device in the promoting arms stockpile of any business.

- Social media is regularly far more affordable than traditional media. In addition to the fact that you pay less for your promotion, yet you additionally pay less per individual that you reach.
- Social media will in general be significantly more intelligent than conventional media, too. New types of media, for example, web-based life take into account direct correspondence and association among business and buyer.
- To place this into point of view, we can contrast a TV promotion and a present moment Facebook crusade. The TV advertisement places more noteworthy accentuation on grabbing the eye of potential clients and puts forth an attempt to persuade them to get tied up with their item or service. Notwithstanding, the TV advert puts practically zero accentuation on holding these recently changed over clients.
- On a related note, social media is likewise more cost-proficient. Burning through cash on new media will probably yield a higher reach than spending a similar measure of cash on conventional media.
- Internet-based life offers a degree of adaptability that conventional media doesn't manage. For instance, when an article in a paper is published, it can't be reclaimed. The most that should be possible is to distribute a withdrawal in a resulting issue. Online networking takes into consideration the altering of substance to suit any circumstance. In our quick paced world, it's anything but difficult to perceive how this can be invaluable.
- Social media has a worldwide reach, though customary media will in general be profoundly local. With new media, you can arrive at the whole globe for a small amount of the expense.
- While the Facebook campaigns place accentuation on getting the eyes of potential clients and changing over them, however, organizes holding these users by utilizing different intuitive strategies, while urging followers to become the part of their organization and spread the uplifting news about it.

The factors that has largely effected the traditional media are:

- i. Readership: The dispersion of free news and information on the web has prompted a decrease in readership for conventional distributions.

- ii. User Generated Content: People have the opportunity of the boundless ongoing discourse on content while Traditional Media is static and is a single direction specialized tool.
- iii. Revenue: The decrease in readership implies sponsors will go through their cash somewhere else and this prompts a decrease in advertisement income.
- iv. Online Channels: People can pick what they need to watch and tune in to when they need to and where with no publicizing interfering with their experience.
- v. Real time information: Traditional Media can't contend within a flash refreshed user produced content that is quickly accessible for the world to see.

Online media has changed the way where things complete today. It has changed the manner by which we cooperate, the manner by which we pass on, and have isolated the dividers of Traditional Media.

Traditional Media will regardless be near, yet the Internet is getting progressively increasingly organized into our step by step lives.

Q2. Discuss the key common professional features among journalists of the world.

Anybody can be a journalist, yet all things considered in any industry, there are the individuals who make the field look great and the individuals who drag the open impression of journalists down.

Since content is made by individuals and not some aloof, entirely fair-minded, and unprejudiced substance, there will unavoidably be those journalists that will demonstrate childishly and obstruct the disclosure of reality.

The essential capacity of journalism is to educate general society by giving an account of nearby, national, and worldwide news and occasions. Given that, journalists endeavor to compose articles that have wide intrigue and can be handily comprehended. You'll recollect that one of the conspicuous attributes in short sentences and sections, which are planned to make the article simple to peruse and comprehend.

A journalist around the globe carries some major common features on the bases of their profession, let's discuss some of them here below;

1. Watchdog: In spite of the fact that specific confused journalists may redirect from reality for egotistically prosperous reasons, those in incredible situations in the public eye endeavor to cover reality too. As such we need great journalists that will demonstrate strikingly as watchdogs, uncovering foul play, defilement, and poor dynamic with respect to pioneers. The individuals who look to exploit their situation to the detriment of those they legitimately effect will keep on doing as such until they are uncovered.
2. Courage: A decent journalist should likewise be valiant and strong. He knows how to pose intense inquiries and digger more profound than agreeable when regarded as fundamental. A journalist is courageous enough to get out on the scene to get a full, one of a kind story. This incorporates venturing out to intense and hazardous occasions to get subtleties.

3. Professionalism: Global journalist should acquire the quality of being professional in the journalism network, you need to fulfill time constraints, tolerating analysis from editors on occasions, and capacity to working for unpredictable timings.
4. Communication skills: Great communication ability assumes an indispensable job in reporting. Just as a good journalist has definitely realized how to lead a meeting generally advantageous. Also, he/she realizes how to outline the article for drawing in the greatest number of crowds.
5. Writing skills: The significant distinction between an exciting piece and a normal piece is strong composing aptitudes. A good journalist ought to have an adoration for words. Good journalists have notable about syntactic exactness and capacity to brief the articles as per the public's desires. Simultaneously, the article or occasions ought to be in a confined word check.
6. Objectivity: Objectivity in journalism plans to enable the public to make up their own psyche about a story, giving the realities alone and afterward letting crowds decipher those all alone.
7. Analytical thinking ability: A good journalist ought to likewise have a diagnostic psyche that permits them to put together stories with respect to realities rather than feeling. Basic reasoning abilities and savvy instinct are essential with regards to details. In any event, when there are exacting cutoff times, a journalist should sharpen these aptitudes to report stories precisely and to check that all data they have found is valid.
8. Excitement.
9. Endurance.
10. Assurance.
11. Certainty.
12. Steadiness.

There are some other features that we consider as common around the globe between journalists;

- Background and demographic profile.
- Gender.
- Age.
- Education.
- Marital status.

- Race & Ethnicity.
- Working conditions.
- Job satisfaction.
- Core values.

The general people expect and merit immediate, exact, and target information. Proficient information commits their life to journalism regardless of what the individual hazard. It's the duty of a journalist to convey real and facts based data or information to the general public whatever country a journalist works in.

Q3. Describe the state of global journalism in digital age.

Journalism in digital Age:

The cutting edge upset has fundamentally modified the manner in which the general population gets its news and information and has denied the mass communications of its conventional imposing business model. Many studies have investigated crossing points between new media, news coverage, and innovation so as to upgrade our comprehension of the impact of information and communication innovation, particularly web innovation on customary news coverage. The media and the act of reporting, be that as it may, have been delayed to change in accordance with the Internet and the worldwide consequences delivered by the new information innovation.

Many organizations today are using computerized upgraded systems on regular bases.

In the present quick paced society, an ever-increasing number of individuals are going to their PCs, cellphones, and Bluetooth gadgets for refreshes extending from Facebook to climate expectations.

The global new and information flow in the digital age is based on four basic elements;

1. Facts
2. Accuracy
3. Context
4. Western agenda.

News should be based on these four elements and we need to analyze news through these elements whether it fulfills the four of the above points.

Particularly with the blast of long-range interpersonal communication and the advancement of cell phones, innovation is rapidly turning into the essential method of accepting information. New mechanical reliance for information has benefits moment notices of news and, email messages permit society individuals to know about what is happening on the planet in just a couple seconds. With correspondence being a significant piece of any culture, the manner by which information is spread needs to adjust to fit the manner in which individuals live. News-casting was once to a great extent print-based when most of the individuals needed to set aside some effort to understand papers. Presently as individuals are going to the web for their information needs, print reporting is gradually being throw away and some even consider print news coverage perishing craftsmanship, as appeared by the consistent the decrease in print paper deals. News coverage divisions everywhere throughout the world need to reexamine the manner in which reporting is being instructed, as procedures of fifteen years prior is not material today. The reporting scene is continually changing, with new advancements and mediums re-characterizing the connection between the news media and people in general. Human instinct being what it is, a few people dread change while others excitedly grasp it. Some are energized by the chance to benefit from evolving conditions. Others are slanted to adhere to the standard of the perilous point of reference, which expresses that literally nothing ought to ever be accomplished for the first time. In this day and age, in any case, it is unimaginable for anybody to escape the persevering the procedure of progress. This is particularly valid for those working in journalism and communications.

The implications are serious, not just for the future of the news, yet in addition to the act of vote based system. The basic idea is that journalism generally has been exceptionally powerful at sparking a focus on the issues and advancements of the day. Yet, conventional journalism, for an assortment of reasons, has frequently neglected to put those stories in enough settings to understand them completely. One of the most critical reasons has been technological advancement. Also, the customary, old media have been the generally single direction in their information stream, from the journalist to people in general. This inactive crowd model has restricted the contribution or commitment of people in general in news-casting and open undertakings.

The appearance of the advanced upset the evolution of the Internet, the rise of new types of media, and the ascent of online interpersonal organizations have reshaped the media scene and made the press of 2011 something that many couldn't have envisioned. From computerized modifying to discount trickery, the media world is currently assailed by an extraordinary scope of expert difficulties. Not just in light of the various media that emerge yet the new elements of work. Consistently the new gadgets and instruments are included exponential development that occasionally seems to cause an overabundance of decisions and openings that journalists and audiences don't have the foggiest idea yet.

Advanced innovations have diagrammed progressive changes in journalism and in a general sense modified the nature and capacity of media in our general public, rehashing age-old acts of open communication and on occasion evading customary media and testing its favored job as watchmen of news and diversion. There are a bunch of manners by which computerized advancements have affected the act of journalism, from the manner in which journalists accumulate information and present reports to how news associations structure themselves and work together. Technological advancement has extended rapidly, penetrating society with new configurations and potential outcomes of communication. Hypertext, interactive media, hypermedia have become business as usual by far most experts and expect schools to change their methods of educating and learning. In the event that we peer into the future, we can predict a media scene ruled by a profoundly divided, however the dynamic crowd, serious media rivalry, and scant publicizing dollars. By grasping new innovations, proficient reporting and media can clutch their job as a fundamental information lifesaver and keep on working as the device of a fruitful vote based system.

With the beginning of the information era and electronic journalism, journalists' capacities have moved from information transmission to information handling. (Jurgensen & Meyer, 1992; Schudson, 1995).

Q4. What are the challenges and opportunities for the future of global journalism?

Global Journalism Challenges & Opportunities:

Let's put a glance on the reality of digital era. In an undeniably spellbound world, the media is being tested more than ever. The web has made it simpler than at any other time for data, and deception, to spread quickly. In any case, innovation likewise presents enormous chances, to contact new crowds, to discover imaginative approaches to recount stories, and to get to information and data that had before been outside the field of play.

The news industry faces exceptional vulnerability and change. The ascent of the web close by improvements in news accumulation, online pursuit, and internet-based life has changed how news is delivered, disseminated, and got to. It has profoundly affected the financial aspects of the profession. Europe is facing this since long and now Asian countries this phenomenon is turning the industry down.

The exact idea of progress in the media condition fluctuates in significant ways from nation to nation, however, there are some unmistakable, significant level shared characteristics that speak to the two chances and difficulties for reporting, media associations, and open discussion.

Let's discuss three important developments in respect to technological advancement and marketplace as of now;

1. The transition to an inexorably computerized, versatile, and social media life condition with progressively serious rivalry for consideration where heritage media like broadcasters and particularly papers, while staying significant newsmakers are getting moderately less significant as merchants of news, what's more, are feeling the squeeze to grow new computerized plans of action as their current tasks decrease or deteriorate.
2. The developing significance of a set number of enormous innovation organizations that empower billions of users around the globe to explore and utilize social media in simple and alluring manners through administrations like a pursuit, social organizing, video sharing, informing, and so on and who as a result play an increasingly more significant job as far as, the appropriation of news and advanced publicizing.

3. The advancement of a highly used media condition where web users approach increasingly more information in helpful configurations, over a scope of progressively advanced individual and versatile gadgets, and in manners that empower new types of involvement, a situation where those generally keen on news grasp these new chances to get, offer, and remark on news, yet a bigger number of individuals decide on increasingly easygoing and detached types of utilization.

During the most recent two decades, the media condition has gotten progressively computerized with the improvement of perpetually progressed and frequently less expensive advanced gadgets, improved availability, and expanded gracefulness of advanced media substance, items, and administrations. As a rule, print readership is declining, TV seeing has been extensively steady yet the crowd is maturing, and time went through with social media has expanded quickly.

The transition to social media has been joined by the ascent of web-based life, in particular, Facebook yet additionally progressively video sharing platform like YouTube, social apps like WhatsApp and Snapchat, photograph sharing destinations like Instagram and Pinterest, and microblogging instruments like Twitter. A few of these administrations are offered by a few huge innovation organizations that possess a focal situation in the advanced media condition Google claims YouTube, while Facebook owns WhatsApp and Instagram.

Challenges:

- Decline in Newspaper readership & circulation: The newspaper readership is declining day by day it is expected that in near future the newspaper readership may downturn this could be a challenge to journalism. Papers, news systems, and news channels are losing viewership and readership as an expanding number of elective news sources become accessible. The nature of these sources ranges from amazingly poor to phenomenal. Indeed, even the most temperamental and defamed wellsprings of information draw in watchers who may some way or another get their report from a significant system or paper, so legitimate media sources end up rivaling scheme scholars and purveyors of purported 'counterfeit news'.
- Personalized News Feeds: Facebook and Twitter have incidentally made online political societies of maximal tribalism and unbounded personalization. Users can storehouse themselves in independent real factors while participating in aggregate articulations of innate shock that frequently appear to be disturbing and confounding to pariahs. Proficient writers can't get away from the way that their work will be acted in the administration of this procedure of political polarization. Online life personalization implies that columnists basically become content advertisers distributing data for a specific specialty. Writers who comprehend this salary model will have a lot of space for proficient development later on.

- 24-Hour News Cycle: This sequence of media reports places journalists in the troublesome situation of distributing stories without legitimate certainty checking.
- Fake News: There comes an element of fake news which may result in creating unfavorable conditions for journalists around the globe and it is in common practice even these days as we go through many fake news reports on social media.

Opportunities:

- Strong connections: The connection would be stronger because of the journalism converting to new technological advancement through different social apps. Securing explicit social inheritances in journalism, rather than imprinting in a homogenous mass, would work to the benefit of the entire globe. Individuals feel increasingly associated if the media puts forth an attempt to interface with them.
- Advance technology: Innovation and new technology is frequently touted as the eventual fate of news-casting. We are more associated than we ever have been previously, and we think that it's peculiar in the event that somebody doesn't claim a cell phone.
- Easy internet access: With the internet commanding our lives, there is an ever-increasing number of voices all yelling to be heard. Not this is fundamentally an awful thing, if the press can be called a certain something, it's no longer elitist.
- Rapid transmission of news: The news transmission would be more rapid as compare to the old days and people would get information in seconds.

Q.5 Discuss the agenda setting function of media from global perspective.

Agenda Setting:

The impact of media influences the introduction of the reports and issues made in the news that influences the public psyche. The news reports make it such that when a specific news report is given significance and consideration than other news the crowd will consequently see it as the most significant news and information is given to them. The needs of which news starts things out and afterward the following are set by the media as indicated by how individuals think and how much impact will it have among the crowd.

Agenda setting happens through an intellectual procedure known as "openness". Media gives facts and figures which is the most relevant thing to think about, representations the significant issues of society, and reflects individuals' minds.

Levels of agenda setting theory are;

- Primary level: The primary level is typically utilized by the analysts to contemplate media uses and its goals or the impacts that media makes on individuals and the most proximal idea that individuals will have on the presentation to the information given by media houses.
- Secondary level: At the subsequent level, the media centers on how individuals should consider the idea of the issues. In this way, the sensationalization of news reports may happen to get the enthusiasm of the crowd. Indeed, the media needs to catch the eye and embed considerations in individuals' minds about some major issues. That is the reason media turn certain issues viral.

Agenda setting is utilized in a political advertisement, campaigns, business news, PR (public relations/advertising), and so on. The fundamental idea related to the hypothesis is gatekeeping. Gatekeeping is accountable for and has control of the determination of substance examined in the media. It is accepted that the public thinks most about the result of media gatekeeping. Editors are simply the primary guards of media. The news media chooses 'what' to communicate and appear through the media 'entryways' based on 'newsworthiness'.

Example: A news of any event takes place in Peshawar comes from different sources, now this is up to editor what information he/she allows to broadcast and what to not.

- Priming: The obligation of the media is proposing the qualities and guidelines through which the items increase a specific measure of consideration can be judged. The media's content will give an adequate measure of existence to specific issues, making it progressively distinctive.
- Framing: Framing is a procedure of particular control. It has two implications. The manner by which news content is ordinarily formed and contextualized inside a similar frame of reference.

Agenda Setting in Global perspective:

A resurgence of enthusiasm for agenda-setting is in progress in different fields of studies. While agenda-setting used to be for the most part concentrated inside the field of the open arrangement, it is presently bitten by bit turning into a key methodology in near governmental issues, party contemplates, political communication, authoritative investigations, and so on. The fundamental thoughts hidden every one of these investigations is those approach issues are in interminable gracefully, that regard for policy-driven issues is rare because of the constrained data preparing limits of people and foundations, and that any strategy change and dynamic require going before political consideration.

The key issue is at that point: for what reason are political entertainers/establishments giving consideration regarding a few issues while disregarding numerous others? The fundamental driver of political consideration, agenda-setting researchers guarantee, is approaching data. Political on-screen characters and establishments must organize and follow up on a stunning measure of data while figuring out which arrangement issues to address. Along with the upsurge in enthusiasm for agenda-setting, the study has seen a blast in examines gathering longitudinal information on the motivation of gatherings, media, governments, parliaments, presidents, and so on. This information gives a chance to political specialists to rethink a significant number of our set up contentions about the role of institutions, ideological groups, and decisions in popularity based frameworks from another point of view and with new cross-national information.

Let's discuss the relationship between media and agenda setting, most work on media and agenda-setting centers around media-sway on battles and appointive outcomes through an assortment of components. Thoughtfulness regarding policymaking and issue-explicit impacts is later. However, the cooperation between political agendas and media consideration might be vital to the comprehension of approach forms.

Specifically we are keen on commitments breaking down the changing degrees of issue consideration in the two media and political agendas. We need to see better how increased degrees of media consideration may influence the needs of government officials and additionally the policymaking procedure.

Gatekeepers are the incredible position that guarantees the correct material is spread to mass. Since certain issues are critical to media however not to masses. Additionally they are quite worried about not contorting harmony and public strength

In basic words, the media gives the most extreme significance to a specific occasion with the end goal that it gives individuals the feeling that the specific news is the most significant one. This is done consistently. The chose news report is continued like a heading or secured normally for a considerable length of time. For instance, terms, for example, features, unique news highlights, conversations, expert opinions are utilized. Media primes news by rehashing the news and giving it more significance like, for instance, Nuclear Deal.

Agenda Setting is one of the most significant media speculations of the current occasions. The idea of the agenda-setting took its name from the possibility that the broad communications can convey the remarkable quality of things on their news agendas and afterward move it to the open agenda. Generally journalists manage the news in a few significant manners. Above all else, they choose which news to cover and which to disregard. At that point they evaluate these accessible reports. In the expressions of McCombs (2002), in a commonplace day by day paper, more than 75 percent of the potential updates on the day are dismissed and never transmitted to the crowd. Papers need more space to print each and everything that is accessible. It is extremely unlikely other than decisions. These are the initial phases in the door keeping schedule. In any case, the news things that go through the door of the media associations don't get equivalent treatment when introduced to the crowd. Some reports are distributed in a more noteworthy length and noticeably showed. Others get just concise consideration. Papers plainly express the journalistic striking nature of a thing through its page situation, title text, and length, and so forth.
