The Honourable Dr. Yasmeen Rashid,
Health Minister office, Islamabad.

Introduction: The present condition of area in the present outbreak of COVID-19

Dear Dr. Yasmeen Rahid,

The federal government has always been an active partner whenever major developments in the history of health care in Pakistan have occurred. I am very optimistic because health care remains a top concern for the liberal government.

Twenty-four person including fifteen men, six women and three children are suffering from COVID-19. Among them were two nurses and one doctor. Many other health providers contracted, but were able to recover. The primary lesson we draw from justice Gulzar Ahmad is the need to practice the precautionary principle. There is a decided lack of certainty around the means of transmission of the COVID-19 virus. While conventional thinking has it that transmission is by means of touch, several studies suggest that these type of viruses can be aerosolized through coughing and sneezing. If this is the case, or if it is unclear whether this is the case, we must protect our health providers who interact with suspected COVID-19 patients.

Today's health needs, however, are different from those of the first accord. We now need to focus on such things as mental health services, pharmacare, seniors care – including home care and long term care – among other health services.

We are aware that there are regular discussions among stakeholders in this province regarding our pandemic response plan. We believe that representatives from the major healthcare unions in the province should be involved in these discussions to ensure the voice of front line workers is not lost. There are important issues to consider, including quarantine plans and locations, the availability of negative pressure rooms within facilities, supply and fit-testing for N-95 respirators, and the treatment of residents and clients in long-term care, homecare and elsewhere.

Yours Sincerely,
Ali Raza
