Q1 What are some things that define a culture?

Ans Culture :

Culture is one of the important concepts in sociology. No human society can exist and develop without its culture.

• The ideas, customs, and social behaviour of a particular people or society.

• Culture is the characteristics and knowledge of a particular groups of people, encompassing language, religion, cuisine, social habits, music and arts.

Consider some of the specific issues or concerns of your generations. Are any ideas countercultural? what subculture have emerged from your generation? How have the issues of your generation expressed themselves culturally? How has your generation made its mark or sought collective culture?

Ans

Today's generation is called the millennial age, and I belong to this new generation. The issues that are associated with the millennials have to do with social media. Young ones dedicate majority of their time to the internet, expressing everything online which make us bogged to bond with friends and family.

Culturally, millennials are perceived to be ③

Technology-savvy such that even the smallest thing is posted online. Because of the fast-paced world, millennials are also perceived to be impatient.

As mentioned previously, that ~~have~~ millennials have created a mark on today's culture. Everything seems to be convenient, fast-paced and accessible to ~~everything~~ everyone. Net could in a way reshape the culture.

Q3

Identify ways sociology is applied in real world?

Ans

Sociology is used in multiple applications; marketing strategies; governments might use the information concerning suicide levels to determine if it is a social problem we need to address.

Legal justice system definitely uses the information; Sociology and psychology are used together to help identify criminals;

Sociology is also used via anthropology to study other cultures and how the development of government has changed.

The correlations gathered from sociology can be used bilaterally in different fields when marketing, knowing the values of your customer base is definitely valuable when trying to "target" to a specific group of people. However, the best of my knowledge, it is usually used by "Grand Scheme" thinkers social friends, which can shift with culture of civilization. Suicide rates, birthrates, death rates, religious beliefs, etc can have an affect on the development of a country, and thus, keeping tabs on them as a 'predictor' has been used for decades.

04 Do you think "When is Rome, do as the Romans do" is already good advice? Why or why not. Have you ever been in a situation where you felt you had to "do as the Romans do"?

Q4 Ans

Yes, of course, because this does not generally mean "participate in ritual human sacrifice if ~~with~~ the culture you are visiting does so". Such sayings often carry some general wisdom, but they all tend to have their limits as well.

It is basically means that when in a situation that what you consider 'normal' isn't to others, you should adapt to their norms and values.

- we host three friendly conversation groups in three different local cafes every week. Our conversations are an opportunity for people who have moved here from overseas to:

- meet others you might not usually meet.
- expand your language skills.
- share stories, experiences and ideas.
- develop new insights.
- build friendships.
- gain about your local area.
- and feel more at home in leish.

Q5' Have you ever experienced culture shock?

Ans Culture shock can be described as the feelings you experience after leaving your familiar home to live in another cultural or social environment. Many people associate culture shock only with extreme changes of moving from one country to another, but it could ~~also~~ also be a move with your own country.

I haven't experienced a culture shock from one country to other. But in Pakistan
I have go from one province to other.
